Best Cellulite Cream of 2010 Reviewed

By Eva Ringold

The best cellulite cream of 2010 was narrowed down to 3 top choices. Each provided some very good qualities when trying to improve skin quality. Revitol cellulite solution was our 2009 winner and is still rated the best cellulite cream for 2010. You can expect to see results in a couple of weeks but overall when it came to cost, the ease of use, ability to actually tone the tissue and the effectiveness this is the winner.

There are many cellulite creams on the market and you have to find a review to compare them all before making your final decision. The runner up creams was a product from the Skin store and another cream from a company called Avatone. Revitol beat the other products because of the use for more natural ingredients and doesn't use harsh chemicals that are found in most other creams.

Getting rid of the cottage cheese appearance is important now because if you live in a cooler environment you want to work on all of your flaws during the "off season" and get your body together.

The skin store cream was good but it took a little bit longer to dry so if you apply the cream and are in a hurry to get somewhere, you will have to plan a few extra minutes for it to dry.

Both of the top companies had excellent customer support and promote money back guarantees so that helps for security after the purchase.

The Avatone cellulite product was actually a gel and not a cream at all. But it still worked well. The only problem was the gel was sticky on the skin and not as smooth as the other two mentioned before. The price was also higher than the others.

After reviewing the most popular creams the best cellulite cream is Revitol.
